About Hospitality Group Training

Hospitality Group Training (HGT) is a not-for-profit organisation specialising in hospitality & tourism education, training, apprenticeships, traineeships and employment.

HGT is the most experienced organisation in training apprentice chefs and hospitality trainees in Perth, Western Australia and were established in 1984.

HGT offers a wide range of services from apprentice and trainee recruitment to professional hospitality and tourism training.

HGT provides nationally accredited on and off-the-job training tailored for apprentices, trainees, employers and staff at various hospitality establishments throughout Perth and regional areas of Western Australia.

HGT also offers schools and colleges a variety of training options including school based traineeships and apprenticeships.

What is Group Training?

Group training is an employment and training arrangement where an organisation employs apprentices and trainees, and then places them with 'host employers'. The group training organisation (GTO) is responsible for the quality and continuity of the apprentices' and trainees' employment and education and also provides enhanced mentoring services to support them during their training.

Group training has been a feature of Australia's apprenticeship and traineeship system for over 30 years. The promotion of training in traditional trades and employment of apprentices and trainees have made group training highly valued.

Today, 120 of these companies service the industry with over 25,000 apprentices and trainees nationwide.
